WHAT YOU WILL FIND

CRAWFORD'S GREAT BROADWAY BAZAAR

MILLINERY MUSLIN UNDERWEAR DEPARTMENT.

If there is one style of feminine headgear above another upon which Crawford's Millinery Department prides itself, it is found in the Lace Hats and Bonnets of which it is making a specialty just now. Every indication points to lace and tulle on wire frames with low trimmings for summer wear as the leading dress headgear, and as usual, the Crawford milliners are prepared to stand in the front rank for style and elegance in their manufacture. Of course, for street wear, traveling and general use one must have a more substantial covering for the head, something that will stand the dust, the sun and the usual accidents incident to crowded street cars, etc.

Here, also, Crawford's comes to the front, and from a plain black straw hat demure enough for Priscilla or Patience to a ravishingly becoming toque capote, there is no end to the possibilities in headgear that Crawford's can accomplish. Decide upon your Lace Hat and give Crawford's skilled milliners a chance to get you up the "sweetest thing you ever saw" for less money than any body else in town.

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, May 11.—The exhibition is now in full blast. What with tens of thousands of visitors from every country and every climate it is a novel and interesting sight. Americans swarm the boulevards. The list of arrivals are interminable. It is estimated by Barker Harries that during the week 12,000 Americans visited the Exposition. The following interviews with prominent Americans will show how they are enjoying their summer vacations, and how tower Eiffel looks to Yankee eyes.

Mr. Belmont, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. August Belmont, arrived a week ago from Madrid. As the author of the bill in Congress which made for the proper representation from the United States possible, Belmont has been the recipient of true Gallic courtesy at the hands of the French Government.

THE FRIEND OF FRANCE.

On the opening day, when President Carnot reached the American section, in the presence of American Commission and exhibitors, Col. Liechtenstein of the Presidential Maison Militaire, who owing to his perfect English acts as Master of Ceremonies where English-speaking celebrities are concerned, stepped forward and greeted Gen. Franklin that if he were present the President very much desired to make the acquaintance of Minister Belmont, "that warm friend of France." Belmont was then introduced in due form. The two gentlemen exchanged a few pleasant words before the President proceeded upon his round of duties. The President closely observed Belmont on leaving and said to Col. Liechtenstein: "I am very glad to have made Mr. Belmont's acquaintance. He is the first man I ever met who had refused the ribbon of the Legion d'Honneur, for it is a fact very little known outside the precincts of the Quai d'Orsay that the French Minister at Washington was charged by his government to offer Belmont the ribbon for his services in Congress in furthering the object of the Exposition, and that he, true to his Jeffersonian simplicity, refused the much-coveted honor."

DELMONT'S VIEW. The Post-Dispatch correspondent found Belmont to-day at the Hotel de Hollande. In reply to the question, what he thought of the exhibition, he said: "It is nothing new save another proof of the vitality and recuperative powers of French industries and commercial prosperity. The chief significance of this, over most of the international exhibitions hitherto held in France, lies in its political effect at home and abroad. For the moment all internal plots against the continuance of republican institutions have sunk into obscurity and seem no longer dangerous, but among the great powers which have for political reasons refused to take part officially in the exhibition there is an unmistakable evidence of widespread and wholesome respect for the strength and durability of the republic, and a distinct, even if reluctant, recognition of the irrepressible growth of liberal ideas in Europe. It remains now to be seen whether the Eiffel Tower is to represent another beacon light of liberty and peace, or whether it will turn out to be a huge lightning rod to attract European jealousies, and concentrate the thunders of European war. We in America can only have the deepest interest in the exhibition and all that it implies. We should in every way show the warmest sympathy for its promoter."

"What do you think of Carnot and his Ministry?" "I think both are stable. Carnot I particularly admire, and he is growing stronger and more popular every day. I feel certain that in the autumn elections republican principles will triumph, that the Reactionaries will have even fewer seats than at present in the Palais Bourbon."

CONFIDENCE IN FARNELL. Col. Creveling, the well-known St. Louisan, said: "I have seen all the exhibitions from that of Vienna on, and must say that the show which opened Monday at the Champs Mars is so infinitely superior to them all as to make comparison out of the question. No other people in the world but the French could have done it, and I advise Americans in every walk of life to come over and see it themselves. Let them come, even if they have to take passage on sailing vessels and tramp steamers. They would find it a paying investment all round. Apart from the pleasure, there are eye-openers on every hand for every trade and profession. The engineering and architectural work is simply magical to behold. I shall say nothing about the Eiffel Tower, for though that is the biggest show on this or any other planet, the underlying principle in its construction is not by any means novel. What I consider the most remarkable feature in the engineering line is the wonderful foundation system. Main and Machinery Hall is based upon an entirely new principle to which I wish to call the attention of all American engineers as it marks a new era in that profession, and the use of steel in building. The structures are placed upon sleeves or centricity, so that the danger of expansion is self-curative and a lean to one side being inevitably counter-balanced by a lean to another. As a citizen of a republic, I was much pleased at the simple democratic character of the ceremonies and the quiet, dignified bearing of President Carnot. It was all so strikingly different from the opening in 1878, at which I was present. Then everything was strut and monotony. M. de Moltke, in his sandy uniform, surrounded by the Prince of Wales and other potentates, looked little like the head of a peaceful republic. I tell you the Reactionists are beaten for good, and we have heard the last of Boulanger. The exhibition and the vast amount of money it brings into the country and the consequent contentment of the people have killed him."

BOULANGER NOT FORGOTTEN IN FRANCE. Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 11.—General Boulanger, considering that he has been ignored by the French people for a week, denounced by the Independence Belge as a liar, and sought daily and nightly by Caricaturist Pilottet who burns to castigate him as a poltroon, continues to maintain his composure and attend to his high society. He also attends strictly to business. He manages to remind the world from time to time that France still remembers him in spite of the Senatorial Inquisition and universal exhibition. His enemies were premature in announcing that Boulanger was done with, that nothing more would be heard of him.

When President Carnot on Monday left the Elisee to open the Exhibition, the report of the election of the General and his friends at St. Omer, a spontaneous and sentimental act of the people, must have been quite as disagreeable if not as startling as the explosion of Perrin's pistol. In fact it was looked upon as so ominous by those around d'Orsay that the President was withheld as long as possible. But the cries in the streets, while he was on his triumphal march brought the unwelcome news to him, and his face was more haggard, and his smiles more constrained than of late. In fact, the opposition is becoming a revolt against universal suffrage and the will of the people. As the General said in an interview to-day, it is a dangerous game to play in France, especially at a time when people are so likely to be made aware of their power by a revival of the memories of the revolution. More than all would the postponement of the elections put an end to the people's patience.

DEVOTION OF FRENCH STUDENTS.

The General appeared in a similar strain to a delegation of students who had come from France to assure him that young hearts as well as old kept his memory fresh. He was deeply touched by their youthful enthusiasm. Their visit was made a merry festival in Portland place, and the young men on their return to Charing Cross made their route vocal with cheer and songs for the General. Now that exhibition has been opened in peace it is believed that Gen. Boulanger is on the eve of issuing an important manifesto.

A CAUTIOUS WITNESS.

Archbishop Walsh on Boycotting—Hewitt in London—Evening in England.

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 11.—Archbishop Walsh was the best witness who has yet appeared before the Farnell Commission, not excepting the snare Le Caron and the cool-headed Irish leader himself. Walsh's testimony was the ticklish subject of boycotting was the prettiest exhibition of intellectual fence we have had since the inquiry opened. "Do you approve of boycotting?" was the crucial question. "What do you mean by 'boycotting'?" was the answer of the cautious prelate. "Do you approve of the practice commonly called boycotting?" "Many practices go by that name in Ireland," was the reply. At length it came to this that the Archbishop thinks boycotting accompanied by intimidation most reprehensible, and that the only form of the practice which can be tolerated is better described as exclusive dealing.

Again, when asked whether he approved of certain parts in speeches delivered by Farnell, the Irish orator's witness frankly admitted that he did not, but declined to accept isolated passages as a satisfactory revelation of what the speaker had in his mind.

THE DEATH TAX.

A number of Conservative members of the House of Commons, under the leadership of Mr. Henry Chaplin, have endeavored to impress upon the mind of Mr. Goschen the extent of the hardship imposed upon the landed classes by the proposal of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to increase the death tax on properties valued at over £10,000. Mr. Goschen, listened to their arguments, but declined to modify his proposal.

extraordinary confession of the previous week caused some excitement, and made his friends feel uneasy. As was to be expected, the Times people and enemies of the Irish cause generally have made the most and worst of it, but they have done little damage. Impartial observers believe that Mr. Farnell seeks to tell the truth at his own expense. The entanglement into which he was drawn by blundering, is not criminal. The misquoting of his speech by the Attorney-General has done him no harm among his friends. This is shown by his election as a life member of the National Liberal Club and by the Edinburgh Council's confirmation without the change of a single vote, after a long and heated discussion in chamber and city of its first resolution to grant him the freedom of the city. Not a jot or tittle of confidence in the man has been abated, nor has his prestige been dimmed.

THE HEWITT BANQUET.

Mayor Hewitt tells your correspondent that the Unionists have not said a word to him about giving a banquet in his honor because he refused to host the Irish flag over the City Hall. "I think it a mischievous thing," he said, "for Americans to come over here and meddle in English politics, and I certainly should be the last man to do it. I am in the iron trade, and while here will inform myself of new ideas in the business which I will utilize at home."

YOUR CORRESPONDENT SAW SOME UNIONIST

politicians and traced the scheme for the dinner to a few men who are very jealous. The report is that the Americans, who are solid behind Farnell, tried to get up a counter-measure by making a big catch of Hewitt, but they never consulted Hewitt about the matter, and the plan met with so little public approval that it fell through.

AMERICANS ON THE THRONE.

Ex-Secretary Whitney, Senators Sherman and Spooner and Congressman Oates of Alabama occupied seats on the throne in the House of Lords and watched the vote in favor of the deceased wife's sister bill. The Prince always turns out when this annual audience comes up for a vote and lobbies very actively to try to get it through very much to the disgust of the full bench of austere bishops, who manage to kill the bill.

HENRY GEORGE.

Henry George has lectured to immense audiences in Scotland and returns here next week. He proceeds to Paris in June to the Socialist convention, thence to Amsterdam and other Dutch cities. He visits Ireland before going back to America.

THE SUGAR BILL.

In Parliament politics have languished, although politicians are bitter as ever. But nothing has stirred up so much bitterness as the sugar bill. The Baron De Worms's project. He was President of the International Conference which with pain and travail brought forth this abortive convention for the abolition of bounties. The Baron was bound to put it through Parliament and introduced the bill to carry out its provisions. Immediately speculators took advantage of it and raised the price of sugar, making a corner. Trade began to feel the effect and industry was interfered with, people began to suffer. Politicians took up the bill. The Liberals denounced it and carried with them the Liberal Unionists and Conservatives.

The outcry was general. Rarely has public opinion been pronounced more decisively against a measure. The Times, which is still quick to feel the public pulse, has advised the Government to withdraw the bill. A conference of co-operative societies was held to-night. The bill was vehemently denounced. A meeting was presented, which showed that if the sugar bill became a law the societies would be taxed half a million. The fears and indignation of the delegates were somewhat tempered by a report that a cabinet meeting was held to-day, and considering the general opposition decided to abandon the bill.

To this result nothing more conducted than Sir Michael Hicks-Beach's weak defense of the measure in the House of Commons, a defense which was elevated to its dignity by the attendance of its official representative in London on the deliberations of the International Conference.

It is true that Col. White, Secretary of the American Legation and Charge d'Affaires in the absence of Minister Belmont, was present at some of the sessions, but it was as the personal invitation of Baron De Worms, as a friend, and the incident could by no means be properly interpreted as having an official character, even though the American Government was not known to have objected to it. This preposterous assumption of the President of the Board of Trade has put an end to the business and the sugar scheme has melted away, leaving a bad taste in many mouths.

PRINCE VICTOR FOR IRISH VICEROY.

Coincident with the proposal on the part of many of the leading Conservatives that the post of Viceroy of Ireland, which is now going a-begging, be elevated to its dignity by bestowing it upon a Prince of Wales, the blood royal and that henceforth only such personages be appointed to the post, the Times and Standard have taken to advising Lord Salisbury to name Prince Albert Victor, the eldest son of the present King, for the place. The articles conveying this advice were undoubtedly inspired by persons in the highest circles in order to test public opinion on the subject and the verdict need not be waited for long. The Dublin Freeman, referring to the suggestion to appoint Prince Albert Victor, says the Irish people care very little whether the office of Viceroy be abolished or not, nor does it matter to them who comes to the castle to assume the duties given up in disgust by Lord Londonderry. If the Prince of Wales himself should undertake to perform in Ireland the social duties he so felicitously discharges in England, perhaps the change would be for the better, but a boy knight and a broad and butter court would crown with ridicule an institution linked with ten thousand shams and crimes. The English Liberals are also unsparing in their condemnation of the proposal, declaring that the time is past for an attempt to save Ireland by a snobbish return to feudalism. The cause of Ireland is past caring at the hands of a royal Duke, and the theory that an ornamental figurehead can save a foundering ship has never yet been and never can be practically illustrated. In the present state of feeling it is extremely unlikely that the experiment will be made.

LOOKING FOR THE MILLENNIUM.

A largely attended meeting was held at Anderson's Hotel yesterday afternoon for the purpose of discussing the feasibility of founding an Elminster church, which shall be free from dogma and bend its energies to finding the millennium on earth, leaving the next world to take care of itself. It was proposed to name the new institution the Christian Church, and it was also decided to erect a building for purposes of worship in London.

O'BRIEN'S TREATMENT.

A close friend of Mr. Wm. O'Brien asserts that that gentleman had several fainting spells while in prison, the result of harsh treatment to which he was subjected. It is expected that this assertion like former ones of similar import will be speedily reduced to a question of veracity between Mr. O'Brien and his friends and the prison authorities, but it is certain that Mr. O'Brien's appearance abundantly attests his having undergone a marked change in health since his latest incarceration.

Government of Samoa was to be carried according to American ideas; they were willing that America should alone hold a footing on the islands as owners of a coaling station. They were ready to give up entirely the interests of German owners of estates to the baphazard deal of mixed consular courts. Various objections they met, which gave the American representatives occasion to pause. When second session was held the talking was so one-sided nor so confident. The spirit of moderation began to steal over all. The object of such a conference began to appear compromise.

A HINT FROM THE THRONE.

Prospect of an Early Settlement of the Berlin Strikes in Germany.

The selection of Mr. F. M. CRUNDEN of this city to be President of the American Librarians' Association was a compliment to St. Louis and a deserved recognition of his ability and admirable work of that gentleman in the interest of public libraries. The building up of the St. Louis their resignations. These cadets after serving at Annapolis for four years, failed to pass the semi-annual examination held last February. On March 4 they were granted leave of absence until May, with the privilege of rejoining the fourth class and continuing their studies. The Attorney-General, to whom the matter was referred, decided that this was contrary to the statutes and recommended that the names of these cadets be stricken from the list.

Fire entrance into St. Louis on an independent basis, with its own tracks and yards, of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway marks a new era in the commercial progress of the city. It is for us a declaration of independence.

gotten up through the night and taken morphine for nervousness. The amount taken proved to be an overdose and caused death after morning. Deceased was at one time known as the handsomest woman in Colorado and Wyoming. She was a variety actress here and at Leadville. At the latter place she was favorite of the Carbonate Kings, who presented her diamonds and other gifts of immense value. Of late years she had been through two divorces and was a slave of the morphine habit.

ROAD TO FAME.

OF MAJ. ARMES AND HIS
ON AS A "CRANK."

Famous in Trying to Pull
His Nose - Entertaining
and Company While Under Arrest - Fight to Be Introduced into States.

WASHING-TON, May
10.-The court-martial
of Brevet Maj. George
A. Armes (retired), the man who became famous in a night
through his attempt to pull the nose of
Gov. Beaver of Pennsylvania, came to an end.

Armes is a man of abilities. One of his own witnesses called him a "crank." I was distinguished by his court-martial with two old cavalry during the trial and they told me interesting things about his early career.

Armes was in the army from 1862 until disabled during the war. He was a cavalryman and very active younger
of the best horsemen that ever strad-dled. He chafed at the inactive life of the reserves, and so, in the fall of 1865, he resigned his lieutenantcy to accept a commission in the Second New York Heavy Artillery, which was then in the field with the Potomac. There he attracted the attention of Gen. Hancock and other distinguished officers and secured a brevet
of volunteers for gallantry in the last year of the war.

A spring of 1866 he was appointed Lieutenant in the Second United States Cavalry and went to the front. During the fall of that year he was sent out on a scout with another lieutenant and a small party of troopers.
He returned to his garrison in a few days with a large band of hostile Indians who had been in the neighborhood of the fort. He was attacked by the Indians and several of the men were killed. He succeeded in driving the Indians away and was promoted to the rank of captain.

Armes was then in progress, and the cavalry regiments on the frontier were kept constantly on the go to keep the red devil away from the working parties that were then rapidly extending the Kansas and Indian Pacific roads
across the plains to the Rockies.

One night late in August, 1867, a column of seven companies of the Seventh Cavalry and a battalion of Kansas cavalry were encamped on the creek about three miles west of Fort Hays, Western Kansas. At about midnight the distant sound of galloping hoofs was heard, and the sentries on out-post informed the commanding officer. Very soon two men rode into camp, and in a few moments more an orderly called all the officers to a consultation.

The strangers were Maj. Armes (he had been brevetted major in the regular army for gallantry at Hatteras and a negro orderly.
Armes reported that while on an extended scout northward toward the Republican River with a squadron he had been attacked just at daylight three days before by a large band of Cheyennes; he had killed them all, losing no men, but having several slightly wounded, and during the night had built a fire and slipped away from the enemy, and by making a wide detour had eluded them. He had marched by night and lay hidden in the daytime, and when the command reached a point some ten or fifteen miles away from Fort Hays he had ridden ahead for help and rations.

There was no more sleep in the Seventh Cavalry or
that night. The troops were roused out, and as each command was ready it marched down to the fort, where everything that could be spared was taken to the storehouse.
Even extra changes of underclothing, and all hands went to work to pack a lot of pack
saddles just received there, and rig them up for use on a pack train of mules. The probability was that the disappointed Indians
would hunt for Armes' trail, and follow it up, hoping to round him up, and, therefore, if the Seventh and the Kansas started at once in different lines it was more than likely that the "dog soldiers" would themselves be taken.

Just as the column was marching out of post Armes, who had ridden back to his quarters, came in at the head of his men. His head was bound up, and a bandage was on his left leg, where the trousers had been ripped open.
Several of his men had been killed, and one of the command) also had on bloody bandages.

The Seventh Cavalry found no Indians and,
finally striking the trail Armes made, they followed it for about two weeks until it led them back to the point where Armes rode into camp in the night. No traces of Indians were found at all, except at one point where they found a hunting camp, but the remains of the wick-i-ups (huts made of small poles) were pronounced by the guides "Wild Bill" Hickok was one of them-to be at least three years old.

Meantime, before
the report of Armes' fight had gone to Gen.
Hancock at Fort Leavenworth, and he sent it to the War Department with high praise for the action, and recommended that Armes be brevetted Lieutenant-Colonel to stimulate other officers. When Maj. Elliott, commanding the column of the Seventh Cavalry, made his report, Gen. Hancock is said to have telegraphed the War Department to revoke the brevet, which it was understood, had already been made out; at any rate, Maj. Armes never received his brevet.

Armes' chief fault seemed an ambitious love of notoriety. In the fall of 1867 the Kansas Pacific road was completed to Hays City, and a commission, headed by the late John P.
Cort, as Secretary of the road, went out there to inspect a twenty-mile section for acceptance by the United States. Armes was then in arrest for row with the post-quarter-master, but he had his arrest enlarged sufficiently to enable him to go to his heels at the hotel where he was boarding, and just beyond the limits of the reservation.

The commissioners were accompanied by a large party, including many officers from posts to the eastward, and the whole party of the little frontier canvas town, with a strong delegation from Fort Hays, had turned out to see and celebrate.

Armes was there,
and apparently managed everything pertaining to the reception. He escorted the party to the hotel dining-room, where a "banquet"
was given for that section then, was participated in. Wines and other fluids were plentiful and free, and that meant much, when very plain whisky cost $20 a gallon at that time. The party were soon completed, and as the official party prepared to return eastward, his disarming offer asked the hotel man for his bill of expenses, only to be told that "Maj. Armes settles everything."
The settlement was made, and the party departed. Armes was not at all a favorite with the officers of his regiment, rather the reverse, but when he was tried and dismissed from the service in the summer of 1879 his conviction was secured
by evidence which has been since criticized and since.

Coming back to Washington he "did permanently" steps to Congress for an advice to his former commission and by opposed by army officers of low rank. Session after ses-

Barr's Fashion Chat.

Chapter II.
Fashion has turned her back square on the severe English gown and hat, and adopted the delightfully becoming French styles, with all their bounces and flummeries.
Talk about the severe form of dress being sensible—oh, yes, it's sensible enough, no doubt, but how many women care for being sensible at the cost of good looks, or how many men give a second thought to a sensible woman when there's a pretty one around?
If you can't all be pretty, you can be charming. You know beauty is felt as well as seen.
Don't you all know some "fascinating" plain or even homely girl whose great and irresistible charm is a grace of manner, expression and movement? A beauty that's felt rather than seen. This girl is never boisterous. There's the whirlwind girl, always in a rush, talks and laughs loudly, and keeps a fellow in a constant wonder as to what she's going to do next. And there's the giggling, gushing girl, who giggles at everything and nothing. And then, by way of blessed contrast, comes the quiet, even-mannered girl, whose sweet, dignified repose of manner gives a man a sense of rest and wins a place in his regard for which the boisterous girl might sigh forever.
Somebody, I believe Ruskin, says, "Keep absolutely calm of temper, girls, under all circumstances, if you want men to admire you." And somebody else says a man always admires a well-dressed woman, and there's no excuse for any woman not being well dressed.
Everybody's interested in warm-weather gowns just now, and everybody can wear the very comfortable, cool, sensible and beautiful Empire styles, or some modification of the Empire fashions. The straight, full skirt and yoked or surplussed waist, with big sleeves, is worn by old or young, young women adding the broad sash, sateens, zephyrs, lawns and challies are beautifully made in this style; and light woolen dresses, with a border of five or six rows of watered ribbon, stitched on the skirt above the hem, are also made in Empire styles, except that the waist is usually in basque shape.
A new lace mantle, to be exhibited at Barr's opening on Monday and Tuesday, is Chantilly lace over a bodice of faille silk, the huge Russian sleeves falling to the foot of the dress.
Don't miss this special summer opening, if it's possible for you to be there, is the advice of action, until Armour's and Oudney's anticipated bull movement assumes a more definite form. The general closing to-day was heavy and featureless, with the trade at sea.

The local hog statistics for the week are as follows: Receipts, 101,254 head, against 95,600 last week, and 101,040 head for same week last year. Received since March 1, 1889, 947,000 head, against 900,000 head for same time last year. Shipped for the week 300,000 head against 300,000 head, and 400,000 head for same week last year. Feeding in Chicago since March 1, 1889, approximately 255,000 head, against 250,000 head in 1888 and 215,000 head in 1887. JASON.

NEWS FROM THE MINES.

LARGE REDUCTION OF THE MINERAL PRODUCTION IN THE CARBONATE CAMP.

Prospect Work in the Allegheny—Discovery of the Continuation of the Miami Ore Chute—The Diner Mill Shut Down—News from the Diner Mill—The Breckinridge Mines.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

LEADVILLE, Colo., May 11.—For various reasons the output of the mines of Leadville has been very light.

About 700 tons of ore per day are being shipped to the smelters in Leadville, and no more than 300 or 400 tons per day are being shipped to the valley smelters.

With the exception of a strike in the Miami, there have been no important developments in the Leadville mines owned in St. Louis.

The Allegheny is still prospecting the ground near the Mikado line, but with no success at all. Where the Mikado ore body was, it is now a puzzle. In the Mikado, however, the continuation of the ore chute has just been found west of the Mikado. This draws the development much nearer the Mikado, and the Agassiz, and completes the line of the ore chute from the Wolfstone to the Mikado.

PROSPECTING THE ULSTER-NEWTON.

In the Ulster-Newton mine on Iron Hill the drifts from the bottom of the shaft are still being driven, but in both the breasts are still in gray porphyry from which it follows that the limits of the dike have not yet been reached. This Ulster-Newton dike is an enormous one, and it is like trying to find the exit of a mine that has been driven for miles.

The drifts have been taken out of the drifts, it having been found more advantageous to drive them by hand. The President, Quintette Whitehouse property, is still idle and nothing is known in Leadville of the future plans of the company. Exploration work is carried on in the Diner in the usual manner. A small amount of ore of very fine grade is being produced, but not enough to pay the operation expenses of the mine. The mine is now being driven for the past month, but will be shut down in a few days, as the ore is exhausted.

AT THE LOCAL THEATERS

THE MUSICAL SEASON BROUGHT TO BRILLIANT CLOSE

The Metropolitan Opera Co.'s Engagements—
—Its Artistic Value—Attractions at Oak
—Two of the Theaters This Week—
Bright Box Actor—Confess Chat.

THERE was only one respect, perhaps, in which the engagement which the engagement of the Metropolitan Opera Co. was disappointing. This was its financial returns.

Little need be added to what has already been written concerning the organization. Every performance was an artistic triumph for the musical forces. There was not a con-

the work was genuinely artistic in that it was nearly every case there was an intelligent grasp and interpretation of the idea of the composer.

formances are bound to raise the standard of public taste while giving finer chances for the appreciation of the master composer. The production of "Nibelung Ring" in its entirety in an admirable style could not fail to be a notable event. It presented Wagner in the highest reach of his genius and the fullest display of his powers. It was a triumph in his work which prevents it from being popular with the masses. It is thoroughly intellectual, and in its most finished form is without simple melody. The interest centers in the plot, the characters, beauty and grandeur in the orchestration. The orchestration is the major part of Wagner's operas. He presents magnificent tone pictures, but it is not a happy one. It is not a happy one because he has not the power to recognize the beauty of them at once. On the other hand, he yields not at all to popular demands and is at times monotonous and wearisome. In securing theatrical effects he is even

Aside from the brilliant work of Lehmann, Alving, Fischer, Kallisch, Sedlmayer, Beck, Meisinger, Traubmann and others the triumph of the week belongs to Anton Seidl and his orchestra. It was in the intelligent and skilful treatment of the orchestral score that one of the chief charms of the performance was to be found. It is a superb organization, capable of brilliant and work and it is under able direction. There was not a great attempt at scenic effects, but such as there were, and the addition of illusive effects here and there satisfied the artistic demands fairly. The production which was given the general approval of the audience, and which may be taken as praise for the local resources in this respect, as nearly all of the scenery was obtained from the Olympic and the University of Washington.

The popular price move was inaugurated too late in the week to be very effective, but it probably would have been successful had it been made from the beginning, or even without them if the engagement had occurred in the height of the season. It would have been a financial success.

The week at the theaters was filled in fairly well, considering the lateness of the season. The production of Herrmann closed the season at the Grand.

[illegible]

Pope's last performance will be given Monday night.

* * *

Pope's will hold open for two weeks more and the first of these two weeks will be filled by the emotional actress, Ada Gray, in "East Lynne." Miss Gray has appeared in her own version of Mrs. Woods' famous story over three thousand times in the principal cities and needs no introduction to a St. Louis audience. The play is full of pathos and dramatic strength, and Miss Gray has many admirers in her impersonation of Lady Isabel and Mme. Vine. A good supporting company promised. The engagement will open with matinee this afternoon.

A BRIGHT BOY ACTOR.

Master Walter Lewis, the Clever 5-Year Old Who Plays Noirtier.

There was a child-wonder at Pope's last week who created a furor in the audience. He was Master Walter Lewis, the son of Mr. Horace Lewis, the star of the "Monte Cristo" company.

Master Walter is a remarkably bright boy,

Master Walter Lewis.
and the people who have seen him act, particularly the ladies, vote him one of the handsomest, cutest and cleverest boys of his age to be found anywhere. He is one of the youngest children who have tried speaking parts and is certainly the only child who ever appeared in the part of Norrit in "Monte Cristo," which taxes the strength of able and experienced actors. But Master Walter takes the part and makes it fit.
He is the best and the wonder when his age is considered. He is only 5 years old and on the stage is passing youngsters in kilns.

way of speaking or the character of the most childish performances. He looks serene, stamps his foot, points his finger and flects his stick exactly as the full grown actor does and the people fairly shout with laughter and approval. He has the cutest little beard, and he looks on his heart and soul the most touching the floor with his foot when the audience call him out before curtain and he invariably gets recall after call. Master Walter has not been drilled much, but has only picked up his lines by business by watching the play at matinee. He can repeat nearly the whole play only watching it.

The way in which Master Walter happens

Miss Bertha Westbrook's Debut.
Miss Bertha Belle Westbrook will appear at the Olympic Theater, May 23 and 24 in the popular drama "Lady Audley's Secret" a Dion Boucicault's celebrated comedy, "London Assurance," supported by an excellent cast. Miss Westbrook is a graduate of the St. Louis Central High School and has chosen the stage as a profession. She is an attractive and accomplished girl who adopts the stage for love of art and with the high purpose of reaching as great success as possible. She has improved her natural talent.

Coultess Chat.

Mr. Chas. G. Weber has returned home from his operatic tour.

A benefit will shortly be given to the children of Selina Dolario.

"A Midnight Bell" is nearing its 100th performance at the Bijou Theater.

The Grand closed for the season with Hermann's engagement last week.

Joseph Wheelock is reading a new play by Arden Smith and Edwin Arden.

The attaches of the Grand Opera-house have a handsome benefit last evening.

Rose Thorne has been granted a divorce from Edwin F. Thorne in California on the ground of infidelity.

Mrs. Lantry will shortly dispose of all her scenery and properties of her various plays.

Della Fox, who made a hit with the Coniston Opera Co., in "The King's Fool," is at home again for the summer.

Joseph McNab has had his name changed to the Nutting Legislature to Frank Joseph Caryl.

John C. McNab is the Mr. Frank Caryle, of the Wife company.

Emma V. Sheridan, the accomplished daughter of Gen. Geo. A. Sheridan, is engaged for the summer to be the actress in the Boston Museum stock company.

Mrs. Charles Watson, the leading actress of Rose Coghlan's company and who was the second wife of Fanny Davenport in appearance, will be the actress in the Boston Museum stock company.

Samuel H. Adshaw, the grandfather of Bijou Fernandez and the reported oldest actor in this country, celebrated his ninety-sixth birthday at his home in Long Island recently.

To-morrow's night Edwin Booth and Lawrence Barrett dedicate the new and magnificent California theater in San Francisco where they are to play an engagement of four weeks.

Mr. Henry Keady, the well-known local actor, has been engaged for next season by Emma Abbott. Mr. Keady sang before Miss Abbott when she was here last, with the result before mentioned.

The German tenor Wachtel will shortly celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into the musical profession. He has sung the Dido Rankin, McKee Rankin's eldest daughter, who made her debut with him a short time ago at the Windsor Theater, has been offered the part of Miranda in "J. H. McVieci," the coming production of "The Tempest."

Mme. Patti, having discarded the niece discovered by her in New Orleans, has transferred her affections to the youngest daughter of Sig. Niccolini, and the diva's new pet has accompanied the prima donna to South America.

There will be two and perhaps three little Lord Fauntleroy at the Olympic next week. Flossy Ethel and Roy Mossell will appear in the role the first of the week and possibly Tommy Russell may be seen in it during the

After parting the cage, Mr. W. G. Smyth, the business manager for the theater, died the other day of a heart attack while controlling the market at Madrid when he noticed a great number of songbirds in cages. He drew a 1,000 franc note from his pocket, handed it to the proprietor and threw open all the cages, saying: "Go and be free, my brothers!" as the birds flew away.

Pope's theater will close next week, and the house will be thoroughly renovated and improved in its interior. The manager has already made contract for the new device by which an opera-glass may be secured by every person in the theater by dropping a dime in a slot. It will be a great convenience, and is a success wherever tried.

Mr. W. G. Smyth, who has been the business manager for Theo. W. Klenke for several years, has been elected to the position of Miss Alida Varena, the prima donna of the American Opera Co., is an American and not a daughter of Italy as many suppose. Miss Varena is the daughter of Mr. J. M. Varena, who was born and raised in Baltimore. Her mother died a widow at an early age, with three daughters; is a woman of great pluck and good sense, who, with her own hands, supported her children and gave them a good education.
